PEOPLE & POLITICS
Facing Democracy's Challenge

A Political
Conversation of
A Different Kind

The Places

Orange County, California; Panama City, Florida; Columbia, Missouri; Hempstead, New York; Austin, Texas; and the National Press Club, Washington, D.C.

The Questions

Fed up with politics and a widening partisan divide, many Americans are turning away from public life. We are, most of us, often spectators rather than participants in a political process that seems to have little to do with citizens.

- What has gone wrong?
- What should we do about it?

The Players

At the center of this program are American citizens, in serious deliberation in National Issues Forums around the nation, and a distinguished panel of nationally known political leaders and commentators, who reflect on what this “public voice” may mean in setting a direction for America.

Host Frank Sesno

- Congressman Allen Boyd, Florida
- Cole Campbell, Dean, Reynolds School of Journalism
- Congressman Elijah Cummings, Maryland
